A UNIVERSAL NEWSPAPER.

Telegraphic reproduction of electrotypes for newspaper printing is the latest achievement of electric invention. The innovation is very remark able and consists in the transferring and reproducing of exactly similar news-papers in different cities by telegraph. A Berlin paper can, by the use of this machine, appear in all the larger cities of Germany at the same hour in the morning without being sent through the mails. The inventors claim for their apparatus not only increased rapidity, but they say also that it will reduce the cost of printing. The in ventors and patentees, Messrs. C. Meray-Horvath and C. Roar, at Gras, decribe the working of the apparatus as follows:

The copy is first of all run off on a typewriter, next to the typewritten copy, which serves as corrector's proof, special attachment releases a narrow strip of silvered paper, which is cover ed by a number of short strokes and dots constituting an alphabet peculiar to this machine. These strokes and dots are made by means of a chemical fluid, which so changes the metallic surface of the paper that it becomes non-conductive. Any corrections becoming necessary can be made on the strip of silver paper; insertion or cut-ting out of copy is also easily per-formed. After being edited and corrected, the long strip of silver paper is rolled up on a spool, and inserted into a telegraphic apparatus, which, when set in motion, will reproduce the same strokes and dots on similar silver paper at any distance and in any number of at any distance and in any number of apparatus connected at the same time. These strips of silvered paper are placed into the "electric typograph." The strip passes beneath six points of electric contact covering the entire, width of the metallic surface. This typograph operates in such a way that the steel type representing each character is impressed upon a prepared acter is impressed upon a prepared cardboard in the proper order. An automatic mechanism provides for the varying width of the type, for the spac-ing and alignment, and for the moving of the cardboard at the end of the line. The cardboard, fully covered with characters, represents one solid column of copy, and is ready for the electro-typer. As compared with the typeparatus gives the advantage of correcting and editing the entire copy from type-written proof sheets. The inventors claim for the typograph that it will do the work of eight expert typesetters and save two-thirds of the cost of setting up the copy by hand.

FIRE CURTAIN OF WATER .- An effective device for the protection of buildings from fires in adjacent structures has been successfully tested in Boston. The idea worked out in apparatus is to maintain a sheet of water between the fire and the building to be protected. This is done by place ing on every open side of the building near the top a line of perforated piping for carrying the water. The complete apparatus consists of a five-inch standpipe extending over the upper story From it runs another pipe around the sides and front from two and one-hal to four inches in diameter. On the front are three revolving sprinklers and one is placed at each exposed side in the centre. The arms are of bronze metal, slightly curved. At each end of the arms is a ball nozzle, such as is used by fire departments on regular hose lines. At the base of the standpipe is a Siamese connection for four lines of three-inch hose. At the Boston test a fire department steamer furnished the power, and for about fifteen minutes poured through the sprinkler a delivery of 1,000 gallons a minute, complete ly drenching the walls and keeping a continuous sheet of water from top to bottom.

Use in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh causing an excessive flow of mucus, and if the mucus discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles. these troubles.
